Six Aurora Musicians Team Up To Put On A Unique Christmas Show

Backthird Audio's 4th annual Tiny Candle Christmas show aims to unite the community with Christmas spirit.

Whispers around Aurora about Backthird Audio's Tiny Candle Christmas show are starting to gain volume as the event sees its 4th year, and offers a night of music, hope – and snacks. The show is an eclectic mash-up of classic Christmas tunes, original music, and Christmas songs no one has ever heard of or will ever hear again. It's followed immediately by a party in the studio lounge with homemade goodies, fresh coffee, and plenty of chat and laughter. This year's participants include Backthird owner Benjie Hughes, his sister Mandy Hughes, Andrea Dawn, Zach Goforth and Ben Thomas, all returning from last year's show. They'll be joined by new addition David Yeager.

"The entire evening was a beautiful celebration of Christmas," said Illinois Entertainer music reviewer Carter Moss, who attended last year's show. "The music was both moving and fun."

Backthird Audio is a recording studio located in downtown Aurora and serves as a meeting place and venue for local musicians. "Nothing brings people together like music," Backthird owner Benjie Hughes said. "My hope is that Tiny Candle is a way for people to connect with each other and share an experience."

Tickets to Tiny Candle are $25, and are available at www.tinycandle.com or by calling Backthird Audio: 630.264.2366. Tickets will be sold only in advance.
